

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An image data analysis security camera having internal logic circuits and remote user controls. The image data analysis security camera samples an initial image and compares subsequent images thereto, if a deviation between the two images is detected the image data analysis camera will initiate a remote alarm. The image data analysis security camera may also be provided with wireless communication capabilities and an internal battery thereby enabling the user to move the camera to another location quickly and easily.